SANDERSON Associates, the Yorkshire traffic and highways engineering consultants, have installed a state-of-the-art computer system to guard against breakdown, fraud and fire.

The Huddersfield-based company has invested more than £50,000 into the system.

Alison France, managing director of Sanderson Associates, said: "We decided it was time to replace the company's existing servers and IT system.

"Our new system comprises of three physical servers and a new data storage unit, two of the physical servers are located on site along with the data storage unit, the third physical server is located off site and is utilised as a full back up system."

She added: "The two on-site servers are fully virtualised servers and can be split into many different virtualised servers. As the two hardware boxes will 'speak' to one another, they are able to take over if one of them has a problem, along with a full off-site third server that would take over automatically if both the main physical servers had issues."
